Emotions ... A special something making us all equal ...

How we each display it, together with a host of other individual characteristics, is what sets us being different from each other ... It is comforting nevertheless knowing, no matter culture, language, colour or background, here is the one thing we, as humans, all have within us.

Emotions felt holding your new born child ... The letting go of your exclusive rights to his or her affection when that time arrives ... Emotions missing an old friend ...

Being lonely oneself ... All this and a little more as we continue and conclude our meandering with Ingrid and her thoughts in this second book of verse.

Ingrid brings to her writing not only life's experiences but also those as a migrant to Australia, her family's migration and her travels with her husband. Above all, she is certain that the good lord has a lot to do with the whole exercise.

Apart from two books of verse, she has completed books for children which she hopes to publish in the near future. Other projects include a book on her childhood, on her mother's life, to be entitled A Mother's Trials, A Child's Tribute and further stories for children ...

As she puts it ... So many tales to be told
Lie waiting in my head
Not quite whole
Yet not really dead ...
